MEET MEGHAN STASI, AN ASSOCIATE DIRECTOR OF THE TRANS

Call amateur golf standout Meghan Stasi traditional. Even though her maiden name (Bolger) has become very familiar over the past few years, she wanted to take her husband Danny's last name when they got married. Talk about a match made in heaven. The woman who played for Tulane and calls New Orleans her second home, moves to Florida to focus on golf, and meets a guy who loves the game and owns a Cajun cuisine restaurant. "I met Danny playing in the Dougherty tournament at Coral Ridge, where he is a member," explained Stasi. "He owns a popular Ft. Lauderdale restaurant called Shuck 'N Dive."

Meghan Stasi grew up in New Jersey and played her college golf at Tulane – she called New Orleans her second home – then went on to coach golf at University of Mississippi from 2001 to 2007. She was still the coach of the Ole Miss women's team when she won her first of two USGA Women's Mid Amateur championships on "home turf" at Mississippi's Old Waverly Golf Course in 2006. She won the Mid-Am again in 2007 at Desert Forest in Arizona, and was selected to represent the United States at the Curtis Cup the following year at St. Andrews, going full circle from team member, to coach, to individual player, and back to team member.

To the right is a glance at some of her golf accomplishments. Congratulations, Meghan.
